One appointive officer for every Republican Senator was the basis on which the Senate caucus agreed that its force of assistants should be organized. This gave to each Senator the privilege of naming one appointive officer, but on account of the large number of applicants for every position it was agreed that the names of the Senators should not be made public in connection with the appointers for whom they stold sponsors. It was believed that this course might avert much confusion in making peace with their clamoring con-stituency.

In making peace with their elamoring constituency.

But after the fifteen appointive offices had been filled it was discovered by Senator Lawrence that none of those named for the positions were competent for engrossing clerk or stenographer. It was accordingly suggested that two new offices be created, none of the Senators who had recommended appointees having been willing to withdraw them in favor of others who might be competent for the important positions for whom persons of peculiar qualifications were desired. Some of the country Senators objected to going before their constituents on the record of creating two new offices at the very outset of the session, when there was no reason to assume that so many would be recoulted, but others insisted that the two set of the session, when there was no tea-son to assume that so many would be required, but others insisted that the two clerks of special qualifications were abso-lutely necessary. Then there were more objections from the country Senators when it was discovered that the candiobjections from the when it was discovered that the candidates named for the two important positions were both from Salt Lake, giving this county, with its four Senators, six appointive officers, besides the President cordingly done.

The Senate caucus was called to order by C. E. Loose of Utah county. Upon motion of S. H. Love of Salt Lake county, Wesley K. Walton of Rich county was made chairman of the caucus and Charles R. Hollingsworth of Utah county was bested accounts.

R. Hollingsworth of Utah county was elected secretary.

Senator George N. Lawrence of Salt Lake courty placed before the caucus the name of S. H. Love as candidate for President of the Senate. The nomination was seconded by Willis Johnson of Plute, Larsen of Sanpete, Loose of Utah and Williams of Salt Lake. There having been no other nomination, Senator Love was elected to the position by acclamation.

Senator Love made a very brief speech of acceptance, saying merely that he sensed the great honor conferred upon him and would be happy to perform the duties of the office with absolute fairness to Republicans and Democrats. He hoped that the confidence reposed in him would not be misplaced.

Upon suggestion of Senator Lawrence that a great many applications were to be considered for the appointive positions and that their consideration could be best accomplished in an informal way, a recess was taken for that purpose.

Arreed on the Slate.

Agreed on the Slate.

The recess was extended from five min-utes to more than an hour before the slate had finally been agreed upon. Then came quite an extended discussion of the addition of two offices to the original list. Senator Willis Johnson of Plute county was the principal objector to what he termed unwarranted extravagance. Senatermed unwarranted extravagance. Sena-tor Lawrence thought that no valid ob-jections could be raised if they could only think of some new names for the newly-created offices, but he admitted that it looked bad to have too many messengers and doorkeepers. The difficulty was finally adjusted by making a doorkeeper of one of the messengers. President-elect Love announced that he would like to have the members make lists of the committees on which they de-

A petition for a caucus to select a candidate for United States Senator was circulated among the members, most of them signing it. The caucus was called for next Wednesday night.

Senator Johnson moved that a committee of three be appointed to frame resolutions of condoience with Senator McKay, to be presented to the Senate on Monday, Senator McKay having recently lost his wife by death. The motion was carried, and Senators Johnson, Hollingsworth and Love were appointed on the committee.

Sad Story Brought Generous Response

Kind-Hearted Public Has Made Holidays Happy for a Suffering Family.

"I came up here to thank The Tribune for what it has done for me," said Mrs. Emma Josephs, as she ventured into the room where the reporters were at work on the next morning's paper. "If it had not been for The Tribune, I do not know what would have become of me. Since that article appeared in your me. Since that article appeared in your paper on Christmas day I have had a stream of people, one fifter the other, through the holidays, each bringing me something to eat or to wear. My three little children and I were almost starving and now we have plenty:

"Won't you put in a card of thanks or something to let these kind people know how much I appreciate what they have done."

Mrs Josephs is the won, an who, with her three children, two of them sick, was in a state verging on starvation at Christmas time. Her story appeared on Christmas day, and the extent of its reading may be judged from the fact that no less than one hundred people responded to this plea for charity. The amounts were not large and most of the contributions were in the form of groceries, foodstuffs, clothing and furniture. About $200 was spent on these things. About £25 in cash came to the woman.

Not only did the people of Salt Lake respond generously, but contributions came from Murray and all the surrounding towns, and also cutside the State, the largest amount among such coming from Mrs. Josephs in the won an who, with argest amount among such coming from a woman in Los Angeles, who sent $10. simply enclosing with the money a wish for a happy new year. There were conributions from outside whose value, howroutions from outside whose value, now-ever, was equivalent to this sum. Mrs. Josephs kept a list of everything sent to her and is taking care of and making the most of it. The list of things as they arrived was enough to astemish anyone. When the reporter first saw Mrs. Joseph's home, she had no carpet on the floor, and no curtains. A well-known man in this city sent her a handsome rug to cover the floor and another contributed curtains for the window. A high chair was sant for the sick haby. The day after Christmas the Salvation army brought a turkey, two dressed chickens and two live ones. So much meat was sent to Mrs. Josephs that she has salted it down for use during the winter.

Five gallons of coal oil, one-half ton of coal, three sacks of coal, one of kindling, 400 pounds of sacked flour, about two sacks of loose flour. These were some of the larger amounts sent. Others some of the larger amounts sent. Others were crackers, oranges, beef, mutton, sugar, steak, mush, potatoes, butter—to the extent of thirteen pounds—canned apricots, felly, peaches, commeal, two pies, one large loaf cake, three loaws of bread, benanas, candy and nuts for the children, currants (dried), bacon, cheese, cabbage, parsnips, coffee, tes, oatmeal, apples, pan-cake flour, baking powder, yeast cakes, chickons, beans, corn, oysters, mince-meat, baking powder, yeast cukes, chickens, turkey, soap, rice, matches, fruit, canned pears, onlons. All these are taken from the actual list kept by Mrs. Josephs as the things came to her. These items are many times repeated.

her. These Items are many times repeated.
Others were table cloth, outing flannel, shoes and rubbers for the children, books, toys, towels, two wrappers for Mrs. Josephs, a jacket, muslin, two dresses for the children, shirt waist for Mrs. Josephs, stockings for the children, two coats, dolls, doll-carriage, gingham, furs for the little girl, shirts for the baby. These also were repeated many times.
Among those who sent to the family were many prominent business men, among them a great many grocers. This certainly shows that even when the desirers and the people were busy with their Christmas shopping they found time to beed the story of the needy. Mrs. Josephs asked especially that the doctors who had attended her sick children and the county should be thanked. The county, she said, had helped to pay her rent, and buy her coal. She is now looking for work.

Satisfactory Progress Toward the Reclamation of Our Arid

Satisfaction with the work it has accomplished and the hope that encouragement will be given for the culmination of the work begun and the extension of the efforts alongs new lines are expressed in the first blennial report delivered yesterday to Governor Cutler by the Arid Land Reclamation Fund commission of Utah. The report details the work the commission has done in bringing to the favorable attention of the Government reclamation service the needs of Utah to the extent that preliminary work has been inaugurated upon what is known as the Bear Lake-Duchesne irrigation project, which, if carried through, will reclaim about 700,000 acres of very productive lands in the Sait Lake, Utah Lake and Cache valleys, and tells of the favorable action which followed its recom-mendation to the department at Washington that the field headquarters of the reclamation service for all the arid States be located at Salt Lake

Water Users' Association.

Touching upon the progress of work connection with the great Utah Irrigation project, the report tells of the preparing of articles of incorporation for a Water-Users association, covering the entire proposed district affected, and of the appointment of agents to circulate copies of the articles for the securing of signatures of water users. The work of securing these sig-natures has aiready been completed in some neighborhoods, while in others some neighborhoods, while in others progress is comparatively slow. The preparation and presentation of these articles, it is pointed out, give the land owners an opportunity to express themselves as to whether they desire the Government to undertake the work proposed, such an expression being nec-essary where land is largely in private ownership, before the Government can undertake the actual work of con-structing the works. "If the number of signers is suffi-cient to justify it in proceeding," the report says, "the Government's next report says. "the Government's next work will be to ascertain what the cost per acre will be for providing the water, and if this shall be satisfactory to the land owners they will be required to enter into specific contracts for the repayment of the cost before the work of construction can be commenced."
